The Stories

The essays in this collection are as diverse as the mothers who wrote them. Some mothers write about the challenges of raising a transgender child in a small town. Others write about the joys of watching their child come out and live authentically. Still others write about the struggles of dealing with discrimination and prejudice.

But despite their differences, all of these mothers share one common bond: love. They love their children unconditionally, and they want nothing more than for them to be happy and healthy.

Here are a few excerpts from the essays:

“ "When my child first came out to me as transgender, I was scared and confused. I didn't know what it meant, and I didn't know how to support them. But I loved them, and I wanted to be there for them." ”
