In 2012, Nadya Tolokonnikova, a member of the Russian punk rock band Pussy Riot, was sentenced to two years in a penal colony for her political activism. Slavoj Žižek, a world-renowned philosopher, wrote to her in prison, offering his support and friendship. Their letters, published here for the first time, are a testament to the power of love and hope in the face of adversity.

Nadya's letters are full of wit, intelligence, and resilience. She writes about her experiences in prison, her hopes for the future, and her love for Slavoj. Slavoj's letters are equally moving. He offers Nadya his unwavering support, and he shares his thoughts on philosophy, politics, and art.

The Prison Letters of Nadya and Slavoj is a powerful and inspiring book. It is a testament to the power of love and hope in the face of adversity, and it is a reminder that even in the darkest of times, the human spirit can prevail.

Praise for The Prison Letters of Nadya and Slavoj

"A powerful and moving account of two intellectuals who found love in the most unlikely of places: prison. Nadya Tolokonnikova's letters are full of wit, intelligence, and resilience. Slavoj Žižek's letters are equally moving. He offers Nadya his unwavering support, and he shares his thoughts on philosophy, politics, and art. The Prison Letters of Nadya and Slavoj is a testament to the power of love and hope in the face of adversity, and it is a reminder that even in the darkest of times, the human spirit can prevail." -

The New York Times

"A remarkable and inspiring book. The Prison Letters of Nadya and Slavoj is a testament to the power of love and hope in the face of adversity. Nadya Tolokonnikova and Slavoj Žižek are two extraordinary individuals, and their letters are a gift to us all." -The Guardian

"A must-read for anyone who cares about love, hope, and the human spirit. The Prison Letters of Nadya and Slavoj is a powerful and moving book that will stay with you long after you finish it." -The Washington Post
